

A VITAL PROCESS FOR ADDRESSING
GLOBAL FOREST CHALLENGES

THE HAMBURG PROCESS

The report highlights how the Hamburg Process has opened a new and exciting member countries support to the challenges and opportunities for our forests from four global issues.

These issues are climate change, biodiversity, forestry and jobs, all of which are critical to present and future generations. Developing an agreement and work focused on all these issues is a massive global effort. Tackling the tragedy of burning species, and all a primary source of their value and biomass. Solutions to the challenges posed by these four issues require major concerted and collaborative action needed to sustainable forest management of the national, sub-national and international levels.
